What went really well or did you really like about this course?

Scale: Open question | 8 answers by 8 respondents

1. To be honest, I liked the second part of the course more than the first part, as the second part is about going beyond the canon and pushes you towards more active engagement with the material. I also really liked that you are able to hand in an endproduct different than your usual philosophy paper/essay (such as a creative essay, podcast, video, etc.).
2. This class did what is aspired to do - it demonstrated various ways on how to break from the philosophical canon.
3. I liked the second part of the course the most because that was really structured and specific and interesting at the same time
4. The powerpoints were clear.
5. I never had a course like this, though I am glad a course like this exists.
6. The teacher really explained the difference between the "alternative methods" for Philosophy and the "classical" Canon very well.
7. I liked that the teachers are passionate about the subject, the different aspects of the course, and that it has one exam and one essay so it doesn't get too repetitive.
8. Examination as a midterm and final paper fits well and assess the learning goals well

What could be improved about this course?

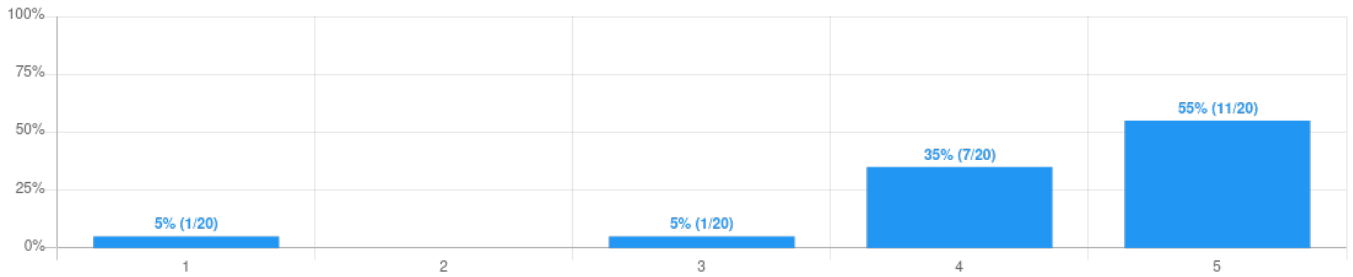

Scale: Open question | 5 answers by 5 respondents

1. The first part of the course
2. I felt the first 3 courses were a little bit vague what the point was or what the discussion was about. I really liked the guest lectures though
3. .
4. Nothing.
5. At the first block of the course it became a bit repetitive since the explanation of the canon was repeated a lot in between the guest lectures, but the rest of it was very interesting.

The lecturer explained the subject matter clearly.
