It was clear to me what my supervisor's and my own responsibilities were in the thesis project.

I received sufficient helpful feedback from my supervisor about the form (language, structure) for my thesis

Approximately how often did you have meetings with your supervisor, and of what duration? (e.g., 30 minutes every 2 weeks, 4 meetings of 90 minutes)

2 responses

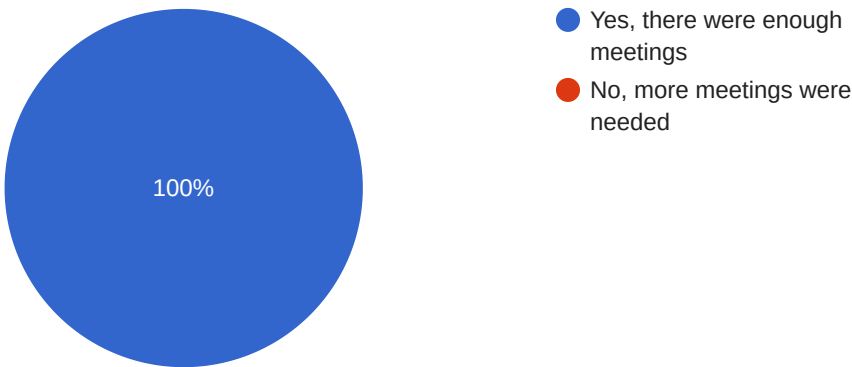

30 minutes every 2 weeks

around 8/10 meetings of 60 minutes

Do you feel the time provided for meetings was sufficient for supporting your thesis project?

The thesis grading criteria and process were clear to me before submission.

My previous study (Premaster, Thesis trajectory course, paper writing in other courses, etc.) gave me adequate preparation for writing my thesis

What (if any) additional preparation do you think could have helped you with writing your thesis?

2 responses

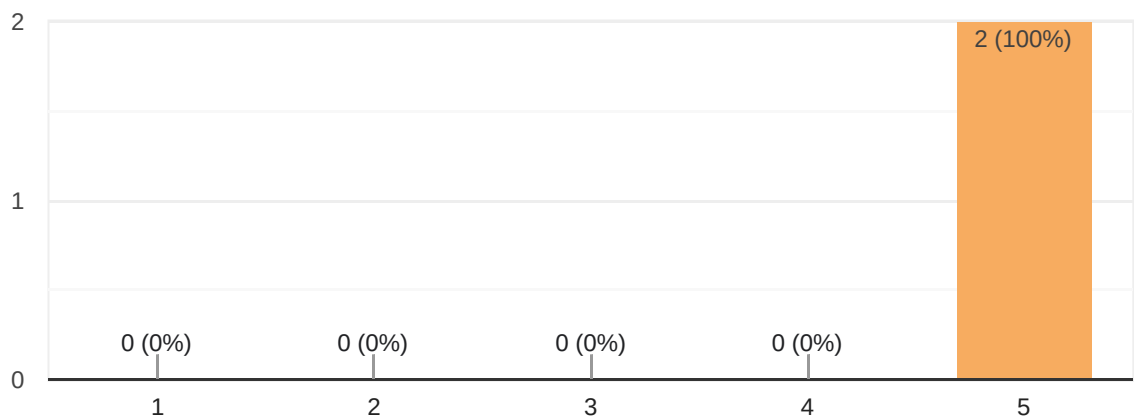

I think it could be helpful to have a course or training on how to break down ideas, and how to present these ideas to the reader in digestible pieces.

Maybe an example thesis for direction, but this was not in any way necessary

Overall, how would you rate the Thesis supervision process?

What went well, or what did you find helpful regarding the thesis writing process, and/or supervision?

2 responses

My supervisor helped me by teaching me how to break down and present ideas, something I had observed in other texts but did not know how to do. My supervisor provided sufficient support academically and by guiding me through the process. I am very happy that my supervisor adjusted the feedback to my level.

The supervisor was very supportive, quick in response, really adequate and helpful in giving feedback. The process and communication was made very clear, as well as his formulation with regards to my writings. The supervisor was very considerate and flexible in difficult times and had an overall helpful balance of providing clear instructions as well as a freedom or autonomy in what and how to write.
